Good Harbor Fillet Leads Corporate Emergency-Preparedness Initiative Partnering with Blackburn Industrial Park Business Neighbors

Gloucester, MA, September 25, 2007 – Good Harbor Fillet has undertaken a new corporate initiative to promote a healthy and safe work environment at their corporate headquarters. To further the effort, Good Harbor Fillet has invited several of their business neighbors at the Blackburn Industrial Park to collaborate on additional safety measures affecting the Park.

Earlier this year, Good Harbor Fillet formed an Emergency Response Committee to implement and maintain a comprehensive emergency response plan for their employees. Consisting of company executives and plant personnel, the Committee is responsible for developing and maintaining all safety and emergency procedures related to the plant. Plan elements range from precautionary personal hygiene and plant maintenance, to a complex IT back-up system should a disaster occur.

In order to extend the initiative, under a recommendation from the Gloucester Board of Health, the Committee has invited other companies located in the Park to share emergency response related information. The first meeting will be held Thursday, September 27, 2007.

“The key to being prepared for an emergency is to be proactive. At Good Harbor Fillet, we’ve always taken pride in maintaining a healthy and safe work environment, and we saw this new initiative as a perfect opportunity to collaborate with other businesses and help keep everyone safer,” said Bill Stride, President of Good Harbor.
